According to the excerpt, being grateful for what we have can hugely enrich our lives, benefiting our physical and mental health and improving sense of happiness. What's accountable for people's lack of gratitude these days are the rising consumerism and that people tend to overlook the constant things in life. As college students, being grateful for what we have carries irreplaceable value. Firstly, it eases our anxiety from academic pressure and peer comparison.

Gratitude helps us build harmonious bonds with roommates, classmates and teachers: appreciating small kindnesses like shared snacks or tutorial guidance brings us warmer interpersonal support on campus. Secondly, Many of us obsess over others' better internships or fancy gadgets, forgetting we already have precious resources like free campus libraries, professional faculty guidance and the chance to pursue higher education.

With gratitude, we focus on making full use of our current advantages instead of chasing endless material upgrades, gaining stable mental well-being and steady progress. The thankful mindset cultivates our resilience: when we acknowledge the blessings we own, we become braver to tackle setbacks in study and life. In conclusion, gratitude allows college students cherish present gains and achieve sustainable growth. ✨ 以上为2026专四整合版答案，欢迎收藏转发给备考小伙伴！ ⚠️ 说明：本版本校对华研、有道考神两套材料，阅读部分41-42、48-49原题材料缺失，故未收录。
